

James Bobeck (BO-BECK)

President, FHAS

Biography

Jim Bobeck is the president of the Federal Hearings and Appeals Services (FHAS). FHAS serves as one of the independent dispute resolution (IDR) entities, the neutral arbiter of the dispute resolution process established by the No Surprises Act.

Before his tenure at FHAS, Jim worked as an attorney, focusing on health care, administrative law, and civil litigation. Mr. Bobeck has extensive experience in health care, administrative law, and government contracting.

He graduated Magna Cum Laude from Villanova University, earned a Juris Doctorate from Boston College Law School, and has received certificates from the Harvard Extension School in Design Thinking and Management. He maintains membership in numerous professional organizations, including the American Health Lawyers Association (AHLA) and the National Association of Independent Review Organizations.
